NUTRITION LESSON 6

UNDER REPORTING.

Why “I don't eat that much” is so often wrong.

“I DON'T EAT THAT MUCH.”

Sound familiar? Lots of people say it, then can't work out why they aren't losing weight.

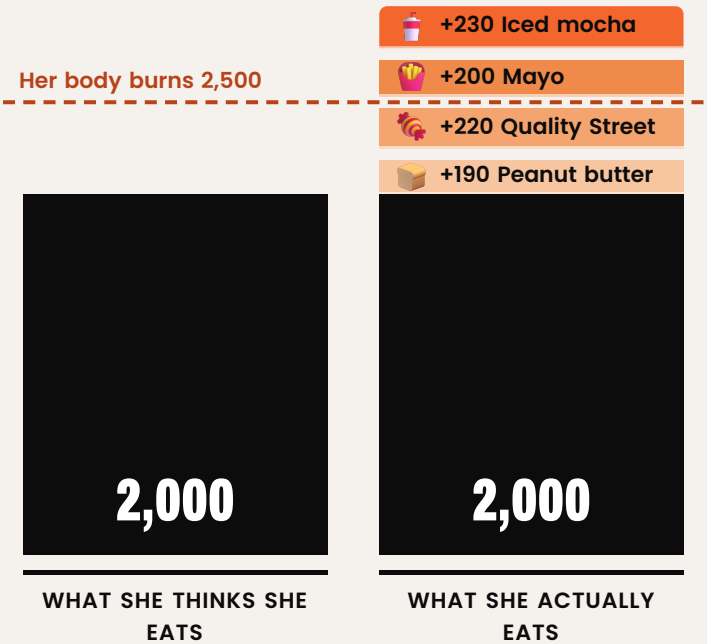

Study after study shows the same thing. Most people eat more than they think, without knowing it. This is called under reporting.

WHY THIS MATTERS

You feel like you're doing everything right but nothing changes. That's frustrating. Often you're eating more than you burn without knowing it, so fat loss slows down or stops.

THINK V ACTUALLY.

Same woman as before. Her body burns 2,500 a day. She tracks her three meals: 2,000. A 500 deficit. Or is it?

SHE THINKS SHE'S 500 under

SHE'S ACTUALLY
340 over

THE RESULT

She thinks she's in a deficit, but she's in a surplus. That's why the scales don't move, or even go up.

WHERE THE EXTRA CAME FROM.

None of it felt like much. All of it went untracked.

PEANUT BUTTER ON TOAST
Spread on thick. Double the portion she logged.

+190

4 QUALITY STREET AT WORK
“Only small.” About 55 each.

+220

MAYO WITH HER CHIPS
For dipping sweet potato fries at lunch.

+200

ICED MOCHA
On the way home. She didn't think it had calories.

+230

UNTRACKED IN ONE DAY 840

THE USUAL SUSPECTS

Snacks, sauces, drinks, bits you pick at, and portions that slowly get bigger. They all count.

THE TV TEST.

On a TV show, a woman was sure she had a slow metabolism. She'd tried every diet and nothing worked. So they tested her.

1. Her metabolism was measured. It was normal.
2. She kept a food diary for 9 days.
3. A special drink and urine tests showed what she really ate.

EVEN WRITING IT DOWN

When she wrote everything down straight after each meal, she still missed 43% of what she ate. She wasn't lying. She just didn't notice.

THIS IS GOOD NEWS.

Her body wasn't broken. She was just eating more than she thought. And that's something you can fix.

TRACK IT ALL, ACCURATELY

Log as you go, not at the end of the day

Sauces, oils and spreads count

So do drinks, coffees and alcohol

And the sweet from the work tin

OUR RULE 3

Track your food every day and get as close to your targets as you can. Then we know you're really eating the right amount for your goal.

REMEMBER THIS.

1 WE ALL EAT MORE THAN WE THINK

It's normal. It's not your metabolism.

2 SMALL BITS ADD UP

Snacks, sauces and drinks count.

3 TRACK EVERYTHING, EVERY DAY

Log it as you go.
